

REID'S HERITAGE HOMES

Reid's has recipe for healthy living

1st builder in Canada to offer Clean Air Kitchen® as standard

The modern kitchen has evolved into more than just a place to prepare meals. It's a family hangout, homework room, breakfast area, party central and more. Research has shown that the average family spends more than half of its time together in the kitchen, which makes it all the more important to ensure that it is a clean and healthy environment, especially for the kids.

Now two leading companies in southern Ontario have joined hands to offer, for the first time in Canada, a safe and healthy kitchen as a standard in a new home.

Reid's Heritage Homes has partnered with The Bamco Group to bring you their renowned Clean Air Kitchen® – designed and manufactured to the highest quality standards, and proven to be among the most environmentally friendly kitchens on the market.

"We congratulate Reid's Heritage Homes for taking the initiative to be the first homebuilder in Canada to offer the Clean Air Kitchen as a standard in their homes," says John Fazari, Vice President Business Development of The Bamco Group. "Today there are many companies out there just riding on the "green" bandwagon. At Bamco, we think differently."

What makes the Bamco Clean Air Kitchen unique and different is their innovative technology, enhanced quality, craftsmanship and style.

Only water-based paints, stains and finishes are used in the manufacturing, and every component is third party tested to ensure that the finishes are completely free of Volatile Organic Compounds and carcinogens.

Made with clean environment friendly NU Green® Particleboard which is more resistant to water damage than conventional board, the Clean Air Kitchen cabinetry incorporates proprietary Hettich recyclable drawers and hinges. It's available in a wide range of designs, colours and textures. The result is a robust, cleaner, healthier kitchen environment.
